You wouldn't think a book about living with chronic illness would have a chapter about joy and laughter. Yet, it was the spontaneous gleeful giggles of her daughter, who spent 8 months living in hospital rooms, that led Sarah Routman to ultimately become a Laughter Yoga leader and teacher.

As so many people are living in isolation due to Covid-19, this book is more timely than the authors could have anticipated. As you read about the challenges of living with chronic illness, woven into the pain and suffering, you will find an unwavering sense of hope. Sarah hopes her chapter will provide insight to the transformative power of laughter to bring moments of sheer joy to even our darkest days.
